

NJ Advance Media for NJ.com

Hunterdon County Democrat

The musical gala that celebrates Bucks County Playhouse rocked all night long with the Midtown Men

Posted on September 28, 2017 at 1:14 PM

Christian Hoff, Michael Longoria, Robyn Goodman, Josh Fiedler, Daniel Reichard, Stephen Kocis, J. Robert Spencer, Alexander Fraser (Courtesy photo)

By Sophie Nieto-Munoz

snietomunoz@njadvancemedia.com,

The extraordinary beauty of Jericho Farms, one of Bucks County's most storied estates, and the rocking sounds of a 1960s-pop sensation set the stage for the Third Annual Galavant in the Garden Gala that benefited Bucks County Playhouse.

Presented by Playhouse Artists, the non-profit organization that supports the growth and sustainability of the Playhouse, Galavant in the Garden was held on Saturday, Sept. 23 and featured a concert by The Midtown Men, four of the original stars of "Jersey Boys."

Hosted by Lynn and Edward Breen, the event was held at their beautifully restored 18th century estate near Newtown, PA. The Galavant began with cocktails and a moveable feast, followed by a very successful live auction, concert and a post-show dessert buffet. Sally and Harlan Weisman of New Hope were the gala's Event Chairs.

Under large festive tents -- as well under as beautiful late summer skies -- attendees feasted on catering created by Iron Chef Jose Garces. Broadway star Justin Guarini and students from the Bucks County Playhouse Youth Company also performed.

Proceeds from the Galavant will support the nonprofit mission of Bucks County Playhouse, which includes the Oscar Hammerstein Festival, a new musical development program, and innovative education programs like the Student Theatre Festival, BCP Youth Company and year-round engagement programs for young people and adults.